Headmaster's Greeting

Our school's educational philosophy: "Independence and Autonomy."

The three years of high school are an invaluable time for young people flying toward the future. The entire meaning of school life is to prepare them for the adult society that awaits them, to give them all manner of different experiences, and to give them the power to carry on when they occasionally misstep. No matter how amazing their knowledge and skills may be, such treasures will remain unused without the will to wield them.

The founding principle of our school was "Independence and Autonomy," and we seek to provide an education that focuses the school, the family, and the student as one on fostering the student's ability to act in accordance with their own abilities.

A School that Is a Village

In order to uphold the principle of independence and autonomy, we at the academy view the school as a miniature version of society at large and have prepared various facilities to allow the students to gain a wide variety of experiences.

Megurigaoka Academy is a village, and as residents of the village, the students can try their hands at various jobs, always with the goal of becoming self-sufficient.

Education Sought After for the New Era

The importance of the spirit of independence and autonomy will never change, no matter what age we are in, but the desired focus of an education changes with the times. In these modern times during which the all-importance of academic credentials and the idea of lifetime employment have gone by the wayside, the ability to better oneself through an individualized plan, or perhaps the power to survive through raising others up, has become essential.

In order to give everyone the power to rise above the stormy seas of society, Megurigaoka Academy strives to provide a practical education.

Our entire staff awaits the enrollment of everyone who has read this pamphlet.

Megurigaoka Academy Headmaster
Jouji Andou

The History of the Institution

Surrounded by the history of Megurigaoka City.

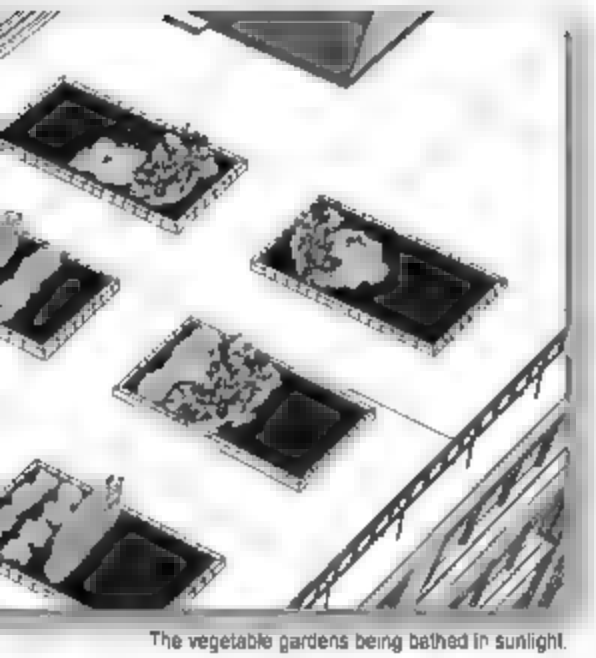
The city of Megurigaoka in S Prefecture was long known as Dando, and people were quite close to the bounty of nature here. The city of Dando was known for its plentiful folklore, and the city is mentioned in books such as the classic Snake Gods of the Impure Land and the more modern Devilish Thinking. The city also kept a strong naval force, and H-shi, a professor of archaeology at K University, has compared the folklore of Dando to that of the West Indies and pointed out the possibility of a cultural exchange between the two places.

After the heartbreaking events of 1968, the worries of a further decline in population led the city of Dando to apply for a city development project. In 1979, the city changed its name to Megurigaoka and began to encourage corporations and local industries to set up business in the area, which has been the cornerstone of the community's current prosperity.

Megurigaoka, the name of both the city and the school, comes from the local rolling countryside and the desire to attain the cultural prosperity of ancient Rome brought by the people who visited the seven hills of Rome.

~721	The Ancient Records of Hajima were established around this time. The name Dando begins to be seen.
1889	The city of Dando is established. The city prospers through fishing and its navy.
1968	Half of the population of Dando is wiped out this year. Later on, this becomes known as Dando's nighttime.
1970	Dando applies for a city development project. The public is asked for ideas for a new city name.
1979	Dando's city development project is approved. The same year, the city's name is changed to Megurigaoka. Other proposed names included Ryuusei (Dando's dawn.)
1984	This year, Dando's population rises to its highest since 1968. (Dando's morning.)
1987	Megurigaoka Academy Private High School is established.
1997	Tenth anniversary of Megurigaoka Academy Private High School.
2007	Twentieth anniversary of Megurigaoka Academy Private High School

Tour of the Facility



The vegetable gardens being bathed in sunlight.

At our school, which strives to function as a self-sufficient village, we have various facilities in the building that are necessary to allow the students to experience different aspects of living in society.

Vegetable Gardens

The heart of independence and autonomy begins with food. Knowing this, our school is in the unique position of having vegetable gardens on the roof and in two other locations on campus, as well as keeping contract farms off campus.

These gardens are mostly tended to and harvested by students taking extracurricular courses or in the gardening club. The harvested foodstuffs are then cooked and fed to the students, while some portion is sold directly to the community under the popular Megurigaoka vegetables brand.

Water Purification System

Just as important to life as food is water. Our school draws water from the ground and the Kuchina River and passes it through our very own purification system to be used for such things as drinking or to fill the pool.

The purification system is powered by in-house generators, so the entire region could use the school as a base in case of a disaster.

Power Generators

Ranking alongside food and water in importance to modern society is power At our school, the building is powered by both solar panels on the roof and hydroelectric turbines in the Kuchina River.

The distribution of this energy is decided by the student council. The extra power is sold back to the city, and this money, along with the savings on water rates because of the water purification system, is included in the budget for the Ryuusei Festival to teach the students the importance of saving energy even in school.

Computer Labs

In the modern age of Internet society, computers are not just tools for learning, but also great weapons, as well as the way to protect against such attacks. Our school has been using computers in learning since before the Internet existed, and we have been on the leading edge of computer education right up to the current day.

In our state-of-the-art computer labs, students learn not just the basics of how to use a computer, but also Internet literacy and security.

The school store stocked with an abundance of goods

Student Kitchens

The majority of the vegetables from the school gardens are cooked in the student kitchens and then used in student meals.

To aid in this, the student kitchens are large, efficient, and outfitted with the latest equipment, matching the scope of the gardens.

In particular, all of the kitchens in the school are put to work for the Ryuusei Festival.

Emergency Food Stores

A portion of the produce from the gardens is preserved in the emergency food stores in the basement. The food in the stores runs from rice and wheat to our own special pickled vegetables. The gardening club's signature ten-year pickled plums are only brought out for special events and celebrations.

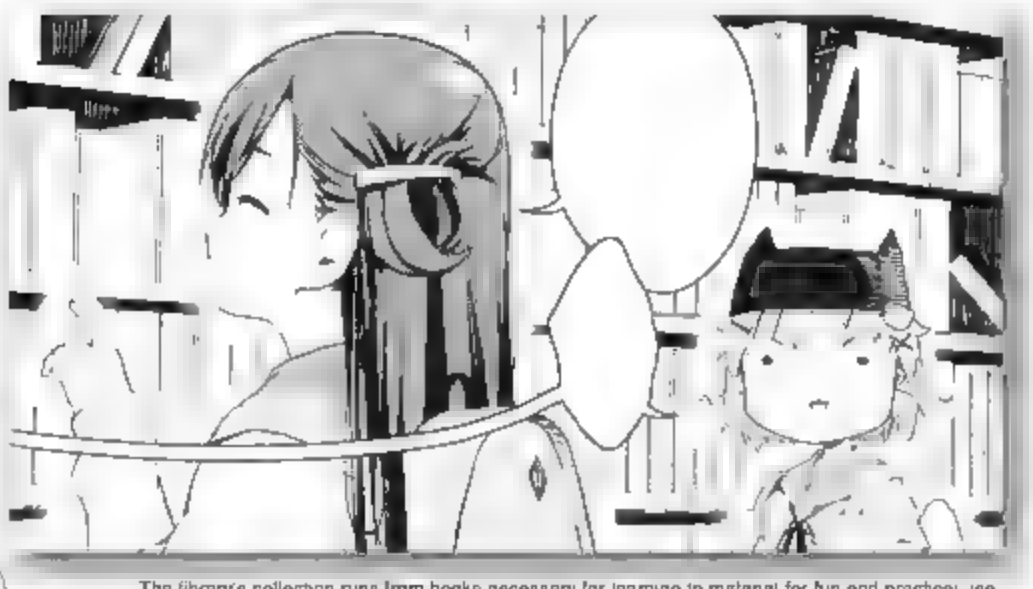
Library

In the spirit of independence and autonomy, the management of the collection in the school's library is mostly left to the students (the library committee).

In addition to the various books needed for academic study, there is a system to add new books according to student polls and requests. The wide variety of texts, including manga and other recreational works, is quite popular.

School Store and Gardening Club

In addition to items for every area of study, the school store sells goods made by the students themselves in their club activities, starting with the uniforms made by the handicrafts club, and a portion of the proceeds from these goods is returned to the clubs as part of their budgets. The gardening club's prize vegetables are used as part of the established school lunches.



The library's collection runs from books necessary for learning to material for fun and practical use

School Life

At Megurigaoka Academy, we put our efforts into a quality academic education as well as various extracurricular courses to provide experiences that teach the spirit of independence and autonomy.

Foreign Language Learning

Our school encourages students to succeed across national borders, so we offer classes in English and ten other languages, including French and Chinese, taught by native speakers that we have invited to our school.

Extracurricular Courses

At our school, we offer courses in all manner of subjects, not just those restricted to the classroom, and every year countless students make use of these courses.

We bring in experts from various fields to offer courses such as the robot course, where students build a hobby robot over the course of a year, or the anime course, where students produce a completed short-form anime. The most popular course, the natural experiences course, in which students catch fish in the nearby Kuchina River and cook them, attracts countless students every year.

Club Activities

Club activities at our school strive to promote exchange with the community The sports teams as well as the cultural clubs are quite close with local residents, thanks to things such as the charity concerts put on by the guitar club and the brass band, and the sale of the gardening club's vegetables.

The Ryuusei Festival

The cultural festival, held every year in October, is the prime occasion for students to show the spirit of independence and autonomy, as well as the top reason students give for choosing our school.

The name of the Ryuusei Festival comes from the legend of a saint who defeated an evil dragon, and the story is performed by the drama club as the Ryuusei Drama Every year the Ryuusei Drama, which interprets the legend in various ways, receives much praise from the community.

The Megurigaoka Academy School Song

Lyrics: Unknown (Old Folk Song)
Adaptation of Lyrics: Takashi Yushimoto
Song: Akira Shirai

First among the seven hills
is the saint whose blade glitters like the heavens.
Roiling in the Kuchina River is the poison breath of the great nine-headed serpent.

Seven days and seven nights of fighting.
What fell from the heavens were tears of blood,
which soaked deep into the ground.
The remains of the fires were the true horror.

The sun travels over the seven hills.
Now the saint is no longer here,
but our incomparable saint's descendants wield his sword in their hearts.

Hold courage fast in your heart.
Go, people of Megurigaoka.

Girls having a fun little tea party in their classroom while you can see the ruined city outside the window.

This is the sight that came to mind while I was chatting at dinner with my usual group of buddies.

Someone said that it was an interesting idea, and then I met Sadoru Chiba-san, who turned my hazy idea into something that made me go, "This! It has to be this!" And with so many connections just like that, and the help of so many people I couldn't name them all, this book came into being.

There really are so many people that I want to thank, but first my gratitude goes to the pioneers.

To Mary Shelley, Richard Matheson, George Romero, Tom Savini, and Brian Yuzna.

And to you, the person who picked up this book.

Thank you.
